ETHIOPIA-SOMALIA: Military and Political Developments

25X1

[REDACTED] Somali efforts to recruit, arm, and train guerrillas to harass Ethiopian forces in the Ogaden are continuing. Meanwhile, the decline in Somali President Siad's political position has temporarily halted as a result of the delivery of foreign military aid and the institution of limited political reforms. Domestic critics, particularly in the north, have been startled by the Ethiopian incursion and have ceased public protest.

Comment: Siad is likely to continue minimal reforms, but he will resist substantial changes. He appears convinced that, without additional military aid, his only hope of ending the Ethiopian incursions is to revitalize the insurgency in the Ogaden. [REDACTED]
